History of Shooting

Shooting has a long history that traces back to man's earliest origins, when spear and projectile throwing contests were used to improve hunting skills. By the 10th century, marksmanship evolved into a social and recreational sport. The first shooting clubs were formed by German-speaking people in the 13th and 14th centuries. The International Shooting Union was founded on Wednesday, the 17th of July, 1907 in Zurich, Switzerland by the representative of eight national shooting federations.

Shooting Today

The International Shooting Sport Federation (ISSF) is the federation that governs shooting throughout the world. Today ISSF has a total of 148 member federations, estimated at around 65 million shooters. The 'ISSF Journal' is published in four languages - English, German, French, and Spanish.

Shooting at the Olympic Games

Shooting featured at the first modern Olympic Games in Athens in 1896 and has featured at all but two Olympic Games (St Louis 1904 and Amsterdam 1928). Baron Pierre de Coubertin, the founder of the Modern Olympic Games was a former French pistol champion. De Coubertin supported the inclusion of five pistol and big bore rifle events on the Olympic program.

Technological advancements in firearms and equipment have resulted in frequent changes to the Olympic shooting competition. In Los Angeles in 1932, only two events were contested. By the Atlanta 1996 Olympic Games, the shooting program had expanded to include 15 gold medal events.

The Australian Shooting Association (ASA) is recognised as the peak body for target shooting sports in Australia. The ASA is a federated body comprising six affiliated organisations: Pistol Australia, Target Rifle Australia, Australian Clay Target Association, Sporting Shooters Association of Australia, National Rifle Association of Australia and Field and Game Federation of Australia.

Total membership of these organisations is in excess of 150 000 persons. ASA's objectives are to promote and coordinate responsible shooting sports, both competitive and recreational within Australia; and to promote and coordinate participation in and organisation of international competitions.

Historique du tir

L'origine du tir remonte à la nuit des temps lorsque les concours d'habileté à la lance ont permis aux chasseurs d'améliorer leurs résultats à la chasse. Cependant, dès le X<sup>e</sup> siècle, l'aspect sportif avait pris le dessus. Les premiers clubs de tir ont été créés par des Allemands aux XIII<sup>e</sup> et XIV<sup>e</sup> siècles. Mercredi 17 juillet 1907, huit fédérations nationales de tir décidèrent de former l'International Shooting Union à Zurich, en Suisse.

Le tir de nos jours

La Fédération Internationale de Tir Sportif (ISSF) joue un rôle centralisateur à travers le monde entier. Elle compte aujourd'hui 148 pays membres et près de 65 millions d'adhérents. Le journal de l'ISSF est publié dans quatre langues - anglais, allemand, français et espagnol.

Le tir aux Jeux Olympiques

Le tir figurait au programme des premiers Jeux Olympiques modernes d'Athènes, en 1896, et depuis lors n'a été absent des Jeux Olympiques qu'à deux reprises : à Saint-Louis en 1904 et à Amsterdam en 1928. Le baron Pierre de Coubertin, fondateur des Jeux Olympiques modernes, était un ancien champion français de tir au pistolet. Il fit donc figurer au programme des Jeux quatre épreuves de pistolet et deux épreuves de fusil gros calibre.

Des évolutions technologiques dans les armes à feu et dans l'équipement ont entraîné des changements fréquents dans la compétition de tir aux Jeux Olympiques. A Los Angeles en 1932, seules deux épreuves étaient disputées. Aux Jeux Olympiques d'Atlanta en 1996, le programme de tir comprenait 15 épreuves donna lieu à des médailles.
